A Passion for French Architectural Heritage

Of France's magnificent architectural monuments, John D. Rockefeller wrote:

"These are not only national, but international treasures, for which France is trustee."

French Heritage Society, proudly celebrating 25 years of achievement, has as its mission the preservation of the French architectural heritage on both sides of the Atlantic.
Compiled of 14 Chapters in the United States and one in Paris, French Heritage Society has participated in the restoration of over 400 châteaux, churches, historic monuments and gardens in France and the United States. In addition to our focus on preservation, we also oversee special education programs, publish books on themes of French culture, and organize cultural travel experiences to share the "hidden gems" of France.

As 'Ambassadors' of Franco-American friendship, we work in both countries to ensure that the architectural treasures of our shared heritage will continue to inspire and delight future generations.
